10 WILLIAM MIX,

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

13 OCWEN LOAN SERVICING, LLC,

14 Defendant.

CASE NO. C17-0699JLR

ORDER ON MOTION TO DISMISS OR TO STAY

15 I. INTRODUCTION

16 Before the court is Defendant Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC's ("Ocwen") motion to 17 dismiss Plaintiff William Mix's amended complaint or to stay the case. (Mot. (Dkt.
18 # 24).) The court has considered the motion, the parties' submissions in support of and in 19 opposition to the motion, the relevant portions of the record, and the applicable law.

1 Being fully advised,¹ the court GRANTS in part and DENIES in part Ocwen's motion to 2 dismiss or to stay for the reasons set forth below.

3 II. BACKGROUND

4 This case involves allegations that Ocwen used an automatic telephone dialing 5 system ("ATDS") to call Mr. Mix's cell phone at least 1,346 times between 2011 and 6 2016 to collect a consumer debt. (Am. Compl. (Dkt. # 18) ¶¶ 28, 32, 35.) Mr. Mix 7 alleges that he received many of the calls after 9:00 p.m. (Id. ¶ 33.) Mr. Mix asserts that 8 even though as early as the fall of 2011 he expressly revoked any consent he had given 9 for receiving the calls, Ocwen continued to call Mr. Mix's cell phone. (Id. ¶¶ 34, 36.) 10 Mr. Mix alleges that the calls negatively affected him by causing him frustration and 11 distress; disrupting his "daily activities and the peaceful enjoyment of [his] personal and 12 professional life," including his ability to use his cell phone; causing him to become 13 depressed and withdrawn; and intruding upon his relationships with "close family 14 members." (Id. ¶¶ 40-42.)

15 Based on these facts, Mr. Mix brings claims for (1) negligent violation of the 16 Telephone Consumer Protection Act ("TCPA"), 47 U.S.C. § 227 et seq.; (2) knowing 17 and/or willful violation of the TCPA; and (3) negligence under Washington law. (Id.
18 ¶¶ 43-57.) He seeks statutory damages of $500.00 for each negligent violation of the 19 TCPA, statutory damages of $1,500.00 for each knowing or willful violation of the 20 TCPA, a permanent injunction preventing Ocwen from further communicating with him

22 ¹ Neither party requests oral argument, and the court determines that oral argument would not be helpful to its disposition of the motion. Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(b)(4).

1 in a way that violates the TCPA, common law damages, and attorneys’ fees and costs.

2 (Id. at 9 (prayer for relief).) Mr. Mix asserts that the statute of limitations is tolled on his 3 negligence claim based on a pending federal class action, Snyder v. Ocwen Loan
4 Servicing, LLC, No. 1:14-cv-8461 (N.D. Ill.). (Id. ¶ 5.)

5 III. ANALYSIS

6 Ocwen seeks dismissal of the complaint with prejudice under Federal Rule of 7 Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) or a stay of the action pending the United States Circuit Court 8 for the District of Columbia’s decision in ACA International v. Federal Communications
9 Commission, No. 15-1211 (D.C. Cir.) (hereinafter, “ACA International”). (Mot. at 1.)

10 Ocwen argues that Mr. Mix’s state law negligence claim fails because it is time-barred 11 (id. at 4-6) and the TCPA does not provide a duty of care for such a claim (id. at 6-7).

12 Ocwen also argues that Washington law does not allow punitive damages in this instance.

13 (Id. at 7-8.) Ocwen further argues that Mr. Mix’s TCPA claims fail because Mr. Mix 14 fails to allege a concrete injury related to Ocwen’s use of an ATDS. (Id. at 8-10.)

15 Finally, Ocwen in the alternative contends that the court should stay the case because the 16 D.C. Circuit will decide two issues “central to this action”: (1) “whether equipment 17 constitutes an ATDS if it merely has the potential to randomly or sequentially generate

18 telephone numbers to be dialed,” and (2) “whether the [Federal Communications

19 Commission] unlawfully imposed an unworkable regime for handling revocation of 20 consent by ruling that any revocation, whether verbal or written, would be sufficient so

21 long as it was ‘reasonable’ under the circumstances.” (Id. at 11.)

1 Because Ocwen challenges Mr. Mix’s standing to assert a TCPA violation—and 2 therefore implicates the court’s subject matter jurisdiction—the court first addresses that 3 issue.

4 A. Standing

5 “Article III of the Constitution limits federal courts’ jurisdiction to certain ‘Cases’ 6 and ‘Controversies,’” which requires a plaintiff to have standing.² Clapper v. Amnesty 7 Int’l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 407 (2013); see also Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 8 --- U.S. ---, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016) (“Standing to sue is a doctrine rooted in the 9 traditional understanding of a case or controversy.”). To establish standing, a plaintiff 10 must demonstrate three elements: (1) a “concrete, particularized, and actual or 11 imminent” injury that is (2) “fairly traceable to the challenged action” and (3) 12 “redressable by a favorable ruling.” Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, 561 U.S.
13 139, 149 (2010). These requirements are more succinctly referred to as injury, causation, 14 and redressability. Nw. Immigrant Rights Project v. United States Citizenship &
15 Immigration Servs., --- F.R.D. ----, 2016 WL 5817078, at *6 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 5, 2016).

16 “The plaintiff, as the party invoking federal jurisdiction, bears the burden of 17 establishing these elements.” Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1547. When “a case is at the pleading 18 stage, the plaintiff must ‘clearly . . . allege facts demonstrating’ each element.” Id.
19 (quoting Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 518 (1975)). When a motion to dismiss attacks

20 21 ² Although Ocwen moves for dismissal only under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 22 12(b)(6) (see Mot. at 8-10), Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) provides the procedural vehicle for a motion challenging the court’s subject matter jurisdiction, see Fed. R. Civ. P.
12(b)(1).

1 the court’s subject matter jurisdiction based on the face of the complaint, “the court 2 assumes the factual allegations in the complaint are true and draws all reasonable 3 inferences in the plaintiff’s favor.” City of L.A. v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 22 F. Supp.
4 3d 1047, 1052 (C.D. Cal. 2014).

5 Ocwen argues that Mr. Mix has not adequately pleaded a concrete injury, instead 6 alleging only a bare procedural violation. (See Mot. at 8 (citing Ewing v. SQM US, Inc., 7 211 F. Supp. 3d 1289, 1292 (S.D. Cal. 2016); Romero v. Dep’t Stores Nat’l Bank, 199 F.
8 Supp. 3d 1256 (S.D. Cal. 2016)).) Mr. Mix counters that “the Ninth Circuit has long 9 recognized and affirmed the TCPA’s congressional purpose to protect telephone 10 consumers from the nuisance and privacy invasion of . . . automated or prerecorded 11 calls.” (Resp. at 10.)

12 To establish an injury in fact, Mr. Mix must show that he suffered “‘an invasion of 13 a legally protected interest’ that is ‘concrete and particularized’ and ‘actual or imminent, 14 not conjectural or hypothetical.’” Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1548 (quoting Lujan v. Defenders 15 of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992)). An injury is concrete if it “actually exist[s].”³ Id.
16 Because of these constitutional requirements, a plaintiff does not automatically 17 demonstrate an injury “whenever a statute grants a person a statutory right and purports 18 to authorize that person to sue to vindicate that right.” Id. at 1549.

19 Since the Supreme Court’s ruling in Spokeo, a number of courts in the Ninth 20 Circuit have addressed what a plaintiff must plead to allege a concrete injury in a TCPA

22 ³ Ocwen does not contest that Mr. Mix’s alleged injury is particularized. (See Mot. at 8-10.)

1 action. Ocwen relies on two of those cases—Ewing and Romero. (See Mot. at 8.) In 2 Ewing, the court concluded that the plaintiff had not adequately alleged a concrete injury 3 because the defendants’ “use of an ATDS to dial [the plaintiff’s] cellular phone number” 4 did not cause injury beyond what the plaintiff “would have incurred had [the d]efendants 5 manually dialed his number, which would not have violated the TCPA.” 211 F. Supp. 3d 6 at 1293. The court further stated that the plaintiff “would have had to expend the same 7 amount of time answering and addressing [the d]efendants’ manually dialed telephone 8 call and would have incurred the same amount of battery depletion.” Id. The court in 9 Romero reached the same conclusion because the plaintiff who asserted TCPA violations 10 against a debt collector “would have been no better off had [the d]efendants dialed her 11 telephone number manually.”⁴ 199 F. Supp. 3d at 1265.

15 ⁴ Romero also held that “[e]ach alleged violation [of the TCPA] is a separate claim, 16 meaning that Plaintiff must establish standing for each violation, which in turn means that 17 Plaintiff must establish an injury in fact caused by each individual call.” 199 F. Supp. 3d at 18 1261. Here, Mr. Mix’s allegations plausibly support a concrete injury from each call because he 19 alleges that they were a nuisance, an invasion of privacy, and an expense. (Am. Compl. ¶ 20.) 20 Mr. Mix does not allege that the totality of the calls caused the injuries of which he complains.
21 (See generally id.) Accordingly, the court finds that Mr. Mix’s allegations are sufficient to 22 establish standing for each call alleged. LaVigne v. First Cmty. Bancshares, Inc., 215 F. Supp.
3d 1138, 1148 (D.N.M. 2016) (stating that the number of calls that the plaintiff answered and the times at which the defendant made the calls “are issues that should be resolved on summary judgment or at trial, based on the available evidence, but are not appropriate for the threshold stage of jurisdictional dismissal based on standing”); DeClue v. United Consumer Fin. Servs.
Co., No. 16cv2833 JM (JMA), 2017 WL 1400144, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 19, 2017) (stating that “[a]ny factual issue regarding the manner in which the calls were placed” should be resolved on summary judgment or at trial); cf. Romero, 199 F. Supp. 3d at 1262 (“Although a defendant violates the TCPA by dialing a cell phone with an ATDS, it is possible that the recipient’s phone was not turned on or did not ring, that the recipient did not hear the phone ring, or the recipient for whatever reason was unaware that the call occurred.”).

1 However, a number of other courts in the Circuit—including this court—have 2 rejected that reasoning. See, e.g., DeClue v. United Consumer Fin. Servs. Co., 3 No. 16cv2833 JM (JMA), 2017 WL 1400144, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 19, 2017) (“By 4 relying almost exclusively on Romero and Ewing, Defendant ignores the overwhelming 5 weight of authority that contradicts those cases.”); Booth v. Appstack, Inc., 6 No. C13-1533JLR, 2016 WL 3030256, at *5 (W.D. Wash. May 25, 2016). Indeed, the 7 vast majority of courts that have addressed the question have concluded that invasion of 8 privacy, disruption of solitude and private life, and wasted time dealing with the calls are 9 concrete injuries. See Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., LLC, 847 F.3d 1037, 1042 10 (9th Cir. 2017) (holding that “the telemarketing text messages at issue here . . . present 11 the precise harm and infringe the same privacy interests Congress sought to protect in 12 enacting the TCPA” and stating that “[u]nsolicited telemarketing phone calls or text 13 messages, by their nature, invade the privacy and disturb the solitude of their recipients”); 14 Abante Rooter & Plumbing, Inc. v. Pivotal Payments, Inc., No. 16-cv-05486-JCS, 2017 15 WL 733123, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 24, 2017) (concluding that the plaintiff had sufficiently 16 alleged a concrete injury based on “an intrusion on [its] occupation and capacity of its 17 cell phones and waste of time”); Quinones v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC, --- F.3d ----, 18 2017 WL 4641083, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 16, 2017) (holding that allegations of invasion 19 of privacy, frustration, distress, disruption of daily activities, and intrusion on one’s 20 personal and professional lives are “sufficiently concrete to confer Article III standing”); 21 see also Mey v. Got Warranty, Inc., 193 F. Supp. 3d 641, 644-45 (N.D. W.Va. 2016)
22 (describing intangible injuries from alleged TCPA violations as invasion of privacy,

1 intrusion upon the capacity of the plaintiff's cell phone, wasting the plaintiff's time, and 2 causing a risk of personal injury from interruption and distraction). In particular, this 3 court has previously determined that an alleged TCPA violation was sufficiently concrete 4 because it "required [p]laintiffs to waste time answering or otherwise addressing 5 widespread robocalls." Booth, 2016 WL 3030256, at *5. Moreover, the Ewing and 6 Romero decisions are "draconian," making it "almost impossible to allege a harm as a 7 result of calls using an ADTS." See LaVigne v. First Cmty. Bancshares, Inc., 215 F.
8 Supp. 3d 1138, 1143 (D.N.M. 2016) ("Under Romero, it appears to be nearly impossible
9 for a plaintiff to allege a private right of action under the TCPA for automated solicitation 10 calls.").

11 Here, Mr. Mix alleges that Ocwen's calls were a nuisance and invasion of his 12 privacy and caused him expense, frustration, and distress. (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 20, 40-42.)
13 Those allegations sufficiently demonstrate a concrete injury in fact for Article III 14 standing. For this reason, the court denies Ocwen's motion to dismiss Mr. Mix's TCPA 15 claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.⁵

16 B. Failure to State a Claim

17 The court next addresses Ocwen's arguments under Federal Rule of Civil 18 Procedure 12(b)(6). Ocwen moves to dismiss Mr. Mix's state law negligence claim as 19 20 ⁵ Ocwen does not challenge the sufficiency of Mr. Mix's factual allegations regarding the 21 TCPA claims outside the context of Article III's concrete injury requirement. (See, e.g., Mot. at 22 10 (stating that Mr. Mix "makes only confusing boilerplate statements referencing standing and harm in connection with his claims, and attempts to plead around the Spokeo requirements with conclusory allegations, which are insufficient to demonstrate standing").

1 time-barred and because the TCPA provides no duty of care to support a negligence 2 cause of action.⁶ (Mot. at 4-7.) The court analyzes each of these arguments in turn.

3 Rule 12(b)(6) provides for dismissal of a complaint for “failure to state a claim 4 upon which relief can be granted.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Although a plaintiff does 5 not have to make “detailed factual allegations,” a complaint must include “more than an 6 unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 7 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). In other words, a complaint must include sufficient factual 8 allegations to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Id. (quoting Bell Atl.
9 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). A claim is facially plausible “when the 10 pleaded factual content allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the 11 defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id. Under Rule 12(b)(6), the court can 12 dismiss a complaint based on “the lack of a cognizable legal theory or the absence of 13 sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory.” Balistreri v. Pacifica Police 14 Dep’t, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990).

15 When considering a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), the court construes the 16 complaint in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Livid Holdings Ltd. v.
17 Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 416 F.3d 940, 946 (9th Cir. 2005). The court must therefore 18 ⁶ Ocwen also argues that Mr. Mix’s request for punitive damages fails because 19 Washington law generally does not permit that type of damages. (Id. at 7-8.) Mr. Mix contends 20 that he “makes no allegations of punitive damages” in his complaint. (Resp. at 2 n.1.) The 21 amended complaint’s prayer for relief requests, among other forms of relief, “[a]ctual, special, 22 general, and compensatory damages” but not punitive damages. (Am. Compl. at 9.) Because Mr. Mix’s complaint does not request—or even address—punitive damages, the court declines to address this issue further other than to note that Ocwen may have moved on this basis because

Mr. Mix requested punitive damages in his original complaint. (See Compl. (Dkt. # 1) at 9.)
However, he omits that request from his amended complaint. (See Am. Compl.)

1 accept all well-pleaded facts as true and draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's 2 favor. Wylar Summit P'ship v. Turner Broad. Sys., Inc., 135 F.3d 658, 661 (9th Cir.
3 1998).

4 1. Statute of Limitations

5 Ocwen contends that any calls before May 4, 2014, are barred by Washington's 6 three-year statute of limitations because the Illinois federal class action does not toll Mr.
7 Mix's Washington state law negligence claim.⁷ (Mot. at 4-6.) Mr. Mix argues that 8 "[s]uch tolling arguments are premature and do not warrant dismissal of the negligence 9 claim given that [Mr. Mix's] allegations expressly include injuries within the statute of 10 limitations, regardless of any tolling." (Resp. at 6.) Nevertheless, Mr. Mix argues that 11 tolling is appropriate here because even though the Illinois federal class action did not 12 involve a negligence claim, the claims he now brings need not be identical to those 13 claims involved in the class action. (Id.)

14 "A motion to dismiss based on the running of the statute of limitations period may 15 be granted only 'if the assertions of the complaint, read with the required liberality, 16 would not permit the plaintiff to prove the statute was tolled.'" Supermail Cargo, Inc. v.
17 United States, 68 F.3d 1204, 1206-07 (9th Cir. 1995) (quoting Jablon v. Dean Witter & 18 Co., 614 F.2d 677, 682 (9th Cir.1980)). For a negligence claim, Washington law imposes 19 a three-year statute of limitations. RCW 4.16.080(2); see also Woods View II, LLC v.
20 Kitsap Cty., 352 P.3d 807, 816 (Wash. Ct. App. 2015). However, "[i]n some instances, a

22 ⁷ Ocwen does not argue that Mr. Mix's TCPA claims are time-barred. (See Mot.)

1 plaintiff can rely on the filing of a prior class action to vindicate the right in question and 2 toll the statute in the event that the class is not ultimately certified.” Clemens v.
3 DaimlerChrysler Corp., 534 F.3d 1017, 1025 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Am. Pipe & Constr.
4 Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 554 (1974)); see also Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 5 U.S. 345, 350-52 (1983). The rule “allows tolling within the federal court system in 6 federal question class actions” and “does not mandate cross-jurisdictional tolling as a 7 matter of state procedure.”⁸ Clemens, 534 F.3d at 1025. Whether the doctrine applies to 8 state law claims depends on whether the state has allowed such cross-jurisdictional 9 tolling. Id. (noting that “several federal courts have declined to import the doctrine into 10 state law where it did not previously exist”). For state law claims, the court must apply 11 Washington law to the statute of limitations and the issue of tolling. See Centaur Classic 12 Convertible Arbitrage Fund Ltd. v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 878 F. Supp. 2d 1009, 1015
13 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2011); see also Coe v. Philips Oral Healthcare Inc., No. C13-0518MJP, 14 2014 WL 5162912, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 14, 2014) (“When a state legal system is 15 unclear on cross-jurisdictional tolling[, f]ederal courts do not generally introduce a 16 rule.”).

17 Washington courts do not appear to have addressed whether cross-jurisdictional 18 tolling applies under Washington law. See, e.g., Pickett v. Holland Am. Line-Westours, 19 Inc., 35 P.3d 351, 359 (Wash. 2001) (addressing American Pipe but not whether 21 ⁸ “The Ninth Circuit used the phrase cross-jurisdictional tolling to refer to situations 22 where a class action is filed in another jurisdiction.” Centaur Classic Convertible Arbitrage Fund Ltd. v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 878 F. Supp. 2d 1009, 1016 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2011).

1 cross-jurisdictional tolling applies); Columbia Gorge Audobon Soc’y v. Klickitat Cty., 2 989 P.2d 1260, 1264 (Wash. Ct. App. 1999) (same). Indeed, the parties’ briefing on the 3 issue focuses on the other side’s failure to show definitively that Washington law does or 4 does not permit cross-jurisdictional tolling. (See Resp. at 6 (“[Ocwen] fails to provide 5 any authority that tolling under American Pipe does not apply to Washington state law 6 claims.”); Reply (Dkt. # 26) at 2 (stating that Mr. Mix’s “[o]pposition offers no reason 7 why he should receive the benefit of American Pipe tolling”).) In the absence of a clear 8 rule permitting such tolling, the court declines to “introduce” the rule here.⁹ Coe, 2014 9 WL 5162912, at *5. However, the three-year statute of limitations applies only to bar 10 Mr. Mix’s negligence claim as to those calls occurring before May 4, 2014. (See Am.
11 Compl. ¶¶ 28, 32 (alleging at least 1,346 calls between April 2, 2011, and early 2016); 12 Resp. at 5 (“Because [Mr. Mix] filed his complaint on May 4, 2017, at the very least, any 13 injuries that occurred after May 4, 2014[,] fall squarely within the statute of 14 limitations.”).) Thus, the court grants the motion to dismiss for calls occurring before 15 May 4, 2014, but declines to dismiss Mr. Mix’s negligence claim for any calls occurring 16 within the applicable limitations period.¹⁰

19 ⁹ In this regard, Mr. Mix’s argument regarding the identity of claims misses the mark.
20 (See Resp. at 6.) The question is not whether the federal class action in Illinois involved claims 21 similar enough to those claims Mr. Mix asserts here. Rather, the question is whether Washington 22 law allows cross-jurisdictional tolling. See Clemens, 534 F.3d at 1025.

21 ¹⁰ The court rejects Mr. Mix’s argument that addressing tolling at this stage is premature.
22 (Resp. at 6.) Mr. Mix squarely asserts the tolling doctrine articulated in American Pipe, thus putting the issue before the court. (Am. Compl. ¶ 5.)

1 2. Duty

2 Ocwen also challenges Mr. Mix’s negligence claim on the grounds that “the 3 TCPA does not provide a duty of care sufficient for a negligence cause of action.” (Mot.
4 at 6.) However, Mr. Mix “does not request that the [c]ourt impose the TCPA as the 5 standard of care, but rather alleges that [Ocwen] owed a duty ‘to exercise reasonable skill 6 and care in carrying out account activities’ and ‘act reasonably when collecting an 7 alleged debt.” (Resp. at 9 (quoting Am. Compl. ¶ 53).) Thus, the court addresses only 8 whether Ocwen owed Mr. Mix a common law duty.

9 Under Washington law, to state a claim for negligence, Mr. Mix must adequately 10 allege facts demonstrating “(1) the existence of a duty to the plaintiff, (2) a breach of that 11 duty, (3) a resulting injury, and (4) the breach as the proximate cause of the injury.” 12 Degel v. Majestic Mobile Manor, 914 P.2d 728, 731 (Wash. 1996). A duty of care is “an 13 obligation, to which the law will give recognition and effect, to conform to a particular 14 standard of conduct toward another.” Affiliated FM Ins. Co. v. LTK Consulting Servs., 15 Inc., 243 P.3d 521, 526 (Wash. 2010) (internal quotation marks omitted). “Duty in a 16 negligence action is a threshold question” and “may be predicated ‘on violation of statute 17 or of common law principles of negligence.’”¹¹ Jackson v. City of Seattle, 244 P.3d 425, 18 428 (Wash. Ct. App. 2010) (quoting Burg v. Shannon & Wilson, Inc., 43 P.3d 526, 530

20

21 ¹¹ In Washington, the violation of a statute or the breach of a statutory duty is not 22 considered negligence per se, but may be considered by the trier of fact as evidence of negligence. See RCW 5.40.050 (“A breach of a duty imposed by statute, ordinance, or administrative rule shall not be considered negligence per se, but may be considered by the trier of fact as evidence of negligence . . .”).

1 (Wash. Ct. App. 2002)); Alhadeff v. Meridian on Bainbridge Island, LLC, 220 P.3d 1214, 2 1222 (Wash. 2009) (same).

3 Mr. Mix alleges that Ocwen owed him a duty of care “to exercise reasonable skill 4 and care in carrying out account activities,” which included the duty “to act reasonably 5 when collecting an alleged debt . . . , including the means and methods for contacting” 6 Mr. Mix. (Am. Compl. ¶ 53.) Although this duty as framed is vague, Mr. Mix’s factual 7 allegations regarding Ocwen’s collection activities indicate that his negligence claim is 8 one for emotional distress.¹² (See id. ¶¶ 40-42, 54-55.) The Washington Supreme Court 9 has “articulated a broad and general duty not to inflict emotional distress,” but narrows 10 the duty “by applying traditional negligence principles.”¹³ Keates v. City of Vancouver,

11 12 ¹² The court has not identified any Washington law definitively stating that a debt 13 collector or loan servicer owes a duty of reasonable care in the collection of a debt. Although the 14 existence of a duty is a legal question, the court notes that Mr. Mix cites no Washington 15 authority establishing such a duty. (See Resp. at 8 (citing cases from New York, Kansas, 16 California, Georgia, and Mississippi).) In addition, Mr. Mix’s complaint does not clearly allege 17 which role—debt collector or loan servicer or both—Ocwen was operating in when it allegedly 18 acted negligently. (See Am. Compl.; Resp. at 8 (addressing cases from other jurisdictions 19 involving both debt collectors and loan servicers).) Finally, although Mr. Mix invokes in his 20 response RCW 19.16.250(13)(c) and 16 CFR § 310.4(c) (Resp. at 9), his complaint fails to 21 adequately allege facts related to a duty arising from the statute and regulation (Am. Compl.
22 ¶¶ 28-42); see also Barrett v. Lucky Seven Saloon, Inc., 96 P.3d 386, 390 (Wash. 2004) (In deciding “whether violation of a public law or regulation shall be considered in determining liability,” courts turn to the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 286.). Thus, to the extent Mr. Mix alleges a general negligence claim not based on emotional distress, his claim fails. However, the court grants Mr. Mix leave to amend his negligence claim as set forth below.

13 Although Mr. Mix also includes factual allegations regarding intrusion of his privacy, the court does not consider those allegations in ruling on the duty question because intrusion of privacy is an intentional tort which Mr. Mix has not alleged. See Fisher v. States ex rel. Dep’t of Health, 106 P.3d 836, 840 (Wash. Ct. App. 2005) (“Invasion of privacy by intrusion consists of a deliberate intrusion, physical or otherwise, into a person’s solitude, seclusion, or private affairs. . . . Intent is thus an essential element.”); (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 43-57 (alleging only TCPA and negligence claims).)

1 869 P.2d 88, 93 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994) (citing Hunsley v. Giard, 553 P.2d 1096 (Wash.
2 1976)). Thus, the duty is cabined by “whether the conduct in question is unreasonably 3 dangerous.” Id.; see also Michaels v. CH2M Hill, Inc., 257 P.3d 532, 543 (Wash. 2011)
4 (quoting Restatement (Third) of Torts: Liability for Physical & Emotional Harm § 7(a) 5 (2010) (“An actor ordinarily has a duty to exercise reasonable care when the actor’s 6 conduct creates a risk of physical harm.”)); see also 16 Wash. Prac., Tort Law & Prac.
7 § 2:2 (4th ed. 2013) (“In general, a duty to use reasonable care will be imposed if one of 8 two conditions obtains: (1) where the defendant engages in conduct that poses a risk of 9 injury to the plaintiff; or (2) where the defendant’s conduct did not itself pose a risk of 10 harm to the plaintiff, but the defendant is found to have a duty to prevent the injury to the 11 plaintiff . . .”). “Unless the defendant’s conduct is unreasonably dangerous, the 12 defendant owes no duty.” Keates, 869 P.2d at 93.

13 Here, the facts Mr. Mix alleges are insufficient to give rise to a duty. Mr. Mix’s 14 allegations that Ocwen called him “hundreds of times” over the course of five years and 15 “infringe[d] on [his] privacy rights” (Am. Compl. ¶ 54) do not support a reasonable 16 inference that Ocwen engaged in unreasonably dangerous conduct creating a risk of 17 harm, see Michaels, 257 P.3d at 543; Keates, 869 P.2d at 93. In addition, Mr. Mix’s 18 allegation that Ocwen made the calls to “harass or abuse” him are conclusory assertions 19 that do not give rise to a plausible inference of a duty. See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (stating 20 that a complaint must include “more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-21 harmed-me accusation.”). For these reasons, Mr. Mix fails to state a claim for 22 negligence, and the court grants Ocwen’s motion to dismiss.

1 3. Leave to Amend Negligence Claim

2 The court’s dismissal of Mr. Mix’s negligence claim is without prejudice, 3 however, because the court cannot conclude that amendment of that claim would be 4 futile.¹⁴ See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2) (“The court should freely give leave [to amend] 5 when justice so requires.”); Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 911 F.2d 367, 373 (9th Cir.
6 1990) (stating that the considerations in determining whether to grant leave to amend are 7 (1) bad faith, (2) undue delay, (3) prejudice to the opposing party, (4) futility of 8 amendment, and (5) whether the party has previously amended its pleading). If Mr. Mix 9 sufficiently alleges unreasonable conduct, his negligence claim may proceed at this stage.
10 See Steckman v. Hart Brewing, Inc., 143 F.3d 1293, 1298 (9th Cir. 1998) (“A claim in a 11 proposed amended complaint is futile if it would be immediately subject to dismissal 12 pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) . . . for failure to state a claim . . .”). In addition, Mr. Mix’s 13 single previous amendment as a matter of course does not warrant denying further 14 amendment.¹⁵ (See Compl.; Am. Compl.); Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1) (stating the 15 requirement for amendment as a matter of course). Nevertheless, Mr. Mix will not have 16 unlimited opportunities to cure deficiencies in his complaint. See McHenry v. Renne, 84 17 F.3d 1172, 1174 (9th Cir. 1996). Finally, the court notes that Mr. Mix’s leave to amend 18 extends only to factual allegations related to his negligence claim and falling within the ¹⁴ Neither party addresses leave to amend in their briefing. (See generally Mot.; Resp.; 21 Reply.)

22 ¹⁵ The court also finds that there is no evidence of undue delay, bad faith, or prejudice, particularly where this case is still in its early stages. (See Dkt.)

1 three-year statute of limitations. He may not amend his complaint in any other manner, 2 including by stating additional factual allegations related to the TCPA claims or adding 3 new claims.

4 C. Motion to Stay

5 Ocwen also moves to stay the action pending proceedings before the D.C. Circuit 6 in ACA International, arguing that the Circuit is considering two issues “central” to this 7 case and that its ruling “could be dispositive of [Mr.] Mix’s TCPA claims.” (Mot. at 11.)
8 Mr. Mix opposes the request, arguing that a stay will prejudice him and that Ocwen has 9 not demonstrated hardship or inequity from having to move forward with the case at this 10 time. (Resp. at 11-13.) Both parties cite numerous cases in which district courts have 11 addressed a stay pending the D.C. Circuit’s decision in ACA International. (See id. at 19; 12 Mot. at 12-13.)

13 To ultimately prove his TCPA claims, Mr. Mix must demonstrate that “(1) the 14 defendant called a cellular telephone number; (2) using an automatic telephone dialing 15 system; (3) without the recipient’s prior express consent.” Meyer v. Portfolio Recovery 16 Assocs., 707 F.3d 1036, 1043 (9th Cir. 2012). In ACA International, the D.C. Circuit is 17 considering, among other things, the definition of an ATDS and the phrase “prior express 18 consent,” which Mr. Mix’s TCPA claims implicate. See ACA International, 19 No. 15-1211, Dkt . # 1; (Am. Compl.)

20 “[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court 21 to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for 22 itself, for counsel, and for litigants.” Landis v. N. Am. Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254 (1936). In 1 determining whether to issue a stay, “the competing interests which will be affected by 2 the . . . stay must be weighed.” Lockyer, 398 F.3d at 1110; Landis, 299 U.S. at 254-55 3 (stating that entering a stay “calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh 4 competing interests and maintain an even balance”). Those interests include: (1) “the 5 possible damage which may result from the granting of a stay,” (2) “the hardship or 6 inequity which a party may suffer in being required to go forward,” and (3) “the orderly 7 course of justice measured in terms of the simplifying or complicating of issues, proof, 8 and questions of law which could be expected to result from a stay.” Id.

9 The first factor favors denying a stay. Ocwen asserts that there will be no 10 prejudice to Mr. Mix from a stay because “[d]iscovery has not yet started and no 11 depositions have occurred” (Mot. at 13), while Mr. Mix argues that a stay would unfairly 12 disadvantage him by imposing “an unknown and indefinite delay in conducting 13 discovery” (Resp. at 12). Mr. Mix specifically contends that cell phone logs may be 14 destroyed, witness memories may fade, and documents may become “misplaced” in the 15 intervening time if the court imposes a stay, and he points to specific information 16 regarding the potential destruction of cell phone records. (Id. at 13); cf. Reynolds v.
17 Geico Corp., No. 2:16-cv-01940-SU, 2017 WL 815238, at *4 (D. Or. Mar. 1, 2017) 18 (“Although plaintiff suggests that a stay would jeopardize the availability of witnesses, 19 accuracy of testimony, and preservation of evidence, plaintiff has not provided any 20 specific argument or evidence concerning why this would be so”) (internal citation 21 omitted)). In addition, although the D.C. Circuit held oral argument on October 19, 2016, 22 there is no indication of when it will issue an opinion and thus of how long a stay would

1 last. See ACA International, Dkt. Thus, the court finds that the delay will result in some 2 prejudice to Mr. Mix. Moreover, even if the D.C. Circuit decides the legal questions 3 favorably to Ocwen, “factual disputes, such as whether an ATDS was used and whether 4 [Mr. Mix] provided [his] consent, will remain.” Lathrop v. Uber Techs., Inc., 5 No. 14-cv-05678-JST, 2016 WL 97511, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2016). All of these facts 6 support denying a stay.

7 The second factor also favors denying a stay. Ocwen’s burden of producing 8 discovery and preparing for trial (see Mot. at 13-16) does not demonstrate a clear case of 9 hardship or inequity, see Lockyer, 593 F.2d at 864 (“[B]eing required to defend a suit, 10 without more, does not constitute a clear case of hardship or inequity.”); Lathrop, 2016 11 WL 97511, at *4 (concluding that although the defendant may suffer hardship in the form 12 of additional discovery, that “potential hardship” did not merit a stay); Hiemstra v. Credit 13 One Bank, No. 2:16-cv-02437-JAM-EFB, 2017 WL 4124233, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 15, 14 2017) (finding that “costly discovery” alone does not demonstrate a compelling need for 15 imposing a stay). In addition, “Ocwen will still be required to produce discovery to settle 16 the factual disputes regarding its autodialing technology and [Mr. Mix’s] alleged 17 revocation of consent no matter the outcome of ACA International.” Franklin v. Ocwen 18 Loan Servicing, LLC, No. 17-cv-02702-JST, 2017 WL 4922380, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 31, 19 2017); see also Montegna v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC, No. 17-CV-00939-AJB-BLM, 20 2017 WL 4680168, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 18, 2017) (stating that the defendant had “not 21 demonstrated this instance as one of the rare circumstances where a court may compel a

1 party in one case to stand aside while a litigant in another settles the rule of law that could 2 define the rights of both” (internal quotation marks and emphasis omitted)).

3 The third factor, however, tips slightly in favor of granting a stay. A stay while 4 awaiting the D.C. Circuit’s decision could save litigation costs and preserve court 5 resources by providing guidance on relevant legal issues. See Reynolds, 2017 WL 6 815238, at *4 (concluding that “a stay may simplify the issues in this case and conserve 7 judicial resources”).

8 On balance, the court finds a stay unwarranted. The prejudice to Mr. Mix from a 9 stay coupled with Ocwen’s unpersuasive showing of hardship by moving forward with 10 the litigation before the ACA International ruling outweigh the minimal preservation of 11 resources a stay would facilitate. The court therefore denies Ocwen’s motion to stay.

12 IV. CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS in part and DENIES in part 14 Ocwen’s motion to dismiss or to stay (Dkt. # 24). The court DISMISSES Mr. Mix’s 15 negligence claim as inadequately pleaded but grants him leave to amend consistent with 16 the scope of this order no later than seven (7) days of the date of this order.

17 Dated this 17th day of November, 2017.
